Who

Homeopathy: Medicine for the 21st Century (H:MC21) is a not-for-profit organisation campaigning to give patients and homeopaths a voice in the future of homeopathy in this country. The centre point of the campaign is the declaration: Homeopathy Worked for Me. This declaration can be signed online at: www.homeopathyworkedforme.org or you can order copies from H:MC21.

Around this is being built an organisation to make the voice heard. There will be meetings around the country, parties, a demonstration in London and lobbying of politicians.

So far two internationally known homeopaths have become patrons, and we have support from other public figures, including Jenny Seagrove (actress), Yehudi Gordon (obstetrician), Gaby Roslin (TV presenter), Michelle Collins (actress), and Carl Myers (actor). We are also gaining the support of thousands of ordinary patients and homeopaths.

Why

This campaign is happening because a small group of senior doctors and academics assisted by journalists are systematically trying to stop referrals to homeopaths within the NHS, and to get the NHS homeopathic hospitals closed. They are proving successful because they have the ear of the media (especially The Guardian) and of decision-makers within the NHS. As part of their strategy they have written to Primary Care Trusts (PCTs), alleging that there is no evidence for homeopathy and demanding that NHS money not be wasted on this therapy. One of these letters was written on NHS headed stationery, despite the fact that it did not represent NHS policy, and the Department of Health has issued a statement denying its validity.

As a result, the Tunbridge Wells Homeopathic Hospital is due to close, the Royal London Homeopathic Hospital is under threat, and referrals are dropping to the hospitals in Bristol, Glasgow and Liverpool. New facilities, such as the one in Nottingham, are also fighting to keep their funding. All this despite the success of the NHS Get Well Scheme in Northern Ireland.

How

The success of this campaign depends on all those who value homeopathy taking this opportunity to get their voice heard by signing the declaration, getting others to sign, writing to their MPs, PCTs and the local and national press and organising meetings ... and parties.
